To whom it may concern:

On Friday, April 26, 2013, Mountville Borough dedicated three new Keystone Town Markers in a ceremony attended by several dignitaries and media representatives. It was the culmination of an effort spearheaded by the Keystone Marker Trust to help Mountville replace the original markers that have not been seen for decades. The Borough Council, Mayor, and citizens of Mountville were excited in anticipation of seeing the Keystone Markers stand guard once again at the entrances to town, and their unveiling far surpassed our most sanguine expectations. In addition to helping Mountville celebrate its bicentennial in 2014, the town markers serve to help re-instill a sense of identity and community on a local level. In a day when it's easy for municipalities to get "lost in the sauce" of metropolitan sprawl, the markers remind us of the uniqueness that make our towns special, and promote civic pride in who we are, and who we strive to be.

Mountville highly recommends and encourages the work being done by the Keystone Marker Trust. They are the conduit through which these Keystone Town Markers are being restored and replaced throughout Pennsylvania. Their commitment to the history and future of our communities reflects well on themselves and on us as a people.

Sincerely,
